It had been a great holiday here in South America with my parents. The highlight of the trip was journeying to the edge of the Amazon Rainforest. We had all been looking forward to it so much. The guide had told us all to stay close by him as he led us through the light undergrowth at the side of the river where our boat was moored. We were all so excited by the sight of the vast, dark forest before us. I bent down, just for a moment, to tie the lace of my trainer and when I straightened up they had disappeared. Mum! Dad! I shouted. Wait for me! Again and again I shouted but there was no answer – just the loud noises of the Rainforest! I was lost!
